

Synthetic research note for ASRQuant contract testing

We hypothesize that rising long-term interest rates predict value outperformance over growth equities.

We test this relationship and find a positive association in the supplied sample.

Future research should examine whether the effect changes across inflation regimes.